

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mechanism for adjusting an object in terms of its position along a vertical axis, and its rotational orientation about either two orthogonal horizontal axes or 5 about a vertical and a horizontal axis, utilizes a set of electric motors in conjunction with a mechanical guiding structure that substantially restricts the movement of the object to the desired translational and rotational directions.